VOCAL POINT

Since its inception in 1991, Vocal Point, Brigham Young University's renowned men's a cappella group, has combined harmony, humor, and remarkable vocal percussion to deliver high-energy performances year in and year out. From national championships to national television, Vocal Point has captured the hearts of millions across the globe. In addition to winning the largest scholastic a cappella competition in the world, the group had a magical run in 2011 on NBC's competition The Sing-Off. Since then, Vocal Point's online popularity has exploded—racking up more than 180 million views on the group's YouTube channel. Additionally, the group has won dozens of Contemporary A Cappella Recording Awards. In 2019, Vocal Point became one of only a few a cappella groups to sign a major record contract when they signed with Universal Music Group. The group originates in the office of Performing Arts Management at Brigham Young University.
